Entries for Books What Is A Citation Page

There are two parts to citations for APA and other styles: the short-form in line, which directs readers to a full entry at the end of a chapter or book. An in-line citation differs from a footnote, which is a note placed at the bottom of a page. An in-line citation—also called the in-text citation—is placed within a line of text. To create an in-line citation, cite the name of the author and the date (in parentheses) of the article,
